THE WOOD GIANT.

From Alton Bay to Sandwich Dome, From Mad to Saco River. For patriarchs of the primal wood We sought with vain endeavor.

And then we said: "The giants old Are lost beyond retrieval, This pigmy growth the axe has spared Is not the wood primeval.

Look where we will o'er vale and hill How idle are our searches, For broad girthed maples, wide limbed oaks,

Centennial pines and birches! Their tortured limbs the axe and saw Have changed to beams and trestles; They rest in walls, they float on seas, They rot in sunken vessels.

This shorn and wasted mountain land Of underbrush and bowider-Who thinks to see its full grown tree

Must live a century older. At last to us a woodland path, To open sunset leading.

Our wildest wish exceeding. Alone, the level sun before, Below, the lake's green islands, Beyond, in misty distance dim,

Revenied the Anakim of pines

The rugged Northern Highlands. Ourk Titun on his Sunset Hill Of time and change defiant?

How dwarfed the common woodland seemed Before the old time giant. What marvel that in simpler days Of the world's early childhood

Such monarchs of the wild-wood: That Tyrian maids with flower and song Danced through the hill grove s spaces, And heary-bearded Druids found

In woods their holy places? With somewhat of that Pagan awe With Christian reverence blending,

We saw our pine tree's mighty arms Above our heads extending. We heard his needles' mystic rune, Now rising, and now dying. As cest Dodona's priestess heard

The oak leaves propaesying.

Was it the half unconscious moan Of one apart and mateiess, The wearmess of unheard power, The loneliness of greatness?

O dawns and sunsets, lend to him Your beauty and your wonder, Blithe sparrow, sing thy summer song His solemn shadow under!

Play lightly on his slender keys, O wind of summer, waking For hills like these, the sound of seas On far off beaches breaking!

And let the eagle and the crow Rest on his stid green branches, When winds shake down his winter snow In silver avalanches

The brave are braver for their cheer, The strongest need assurance,
The sigh of conging makes not less
The lesson of endurance.
